Looking for things to do in London this weekend? Your search is over: we round up the best the city has to offer

GET CLUED UP AT LONDON'S FEMINIST FILM FESTIVAL

The London Feminist Film Festival was set up in 2012 to celebrates feminist films – past and present – from international women directors. The festival returns this week, screening dozens of movies by female directors from across the world at the Rio Cinema in Dalston and Genesis in Whitechapel. The festival kicks off on Thursday evening with a newly restored and digitised African feminist film, Fa from 1975.
